

Curved and colourful

That office buildings made of steel can be creative, has been demonstrated by Astron Builder Partner Skalski in Poland. This creative multi-storey office building was erected in Krakow and has since served as the client's representative headquarters. The curved shape of the building symbolizes the company's logo, a big S.

The client wanted a building made of lightweight, transparent materials. In order to meet the requirements, Astron designed a structure with lots of glass and bright colours, which convey an impression of lightness and airiness. The open design means that the building also has a light and bright interior. The front of the building forms a semicircle with a radius of 32 metres and consists of double-glazed windows.

This creative office building in Krakow is a successful and absolutely convincing example of the versatile possibilities of modern steel structures.

