

An individual solution

The integrated parking deck is part of a 6,000 m² building in Buchelay, France. The client runs one of the most important architectural firms nationwide, which is why the company's own headquarters has, of course, to meet top standards.

The modern headquarters consists of three buildings. The larger conventional one has a square design. By means of a second building, it is connected to the highlight of the building complex: a round building. The integrated parking deck has been created on the bottom level of this building. The parking deck was constructed using round supports that are integrated into the floors of the multi-storey building. In addition to its shape, another highlight of the structure is its colour: This varies according to the viewer's angle of vision.
